Chapter 1 by Jennifer

The dog had barely made a peep in over a month since I took her home from the rescue. She was overly well behaved, and overly serious. They said the family brought her in after their house caught on fire. The vet records showed that she had been treated for smoke inhalation.

So it was kind of strange that night when we were sitting on the couch together, my chihuahua and I, watching TV, and a low growl began to emanate from her tiny throat.

I turned off the TV. She continued to stare into the middle of the room, her growl becoming more fierce.
